How Do You Walk?

Dear Friends,

Here is a random little anecdote that happened recently. I'm doing a long hike in the Wind River Mountain Range of Wyoming. We are a large group of about sixteen priests hiking towards a lake to make a base camp. We are on the first leg of this hike, which is just over 9 miles long. The second leg we are looking at 12 miles and the third is another 9 miles. Some are hiking quickly and others are taking their time. The reality is that not everyone can go at the same pace. I am just sort of hitting my stride, which includes bearing a full pack that feels like it weighs more than it should. I am trying to focus on the task—keeping up, avoiding sunburn, getting to the base camp. One of the priests stops. In his words, "I may have taken on more than I can handle." In reality, altitude sickness is hitting him; we are hiking at around the 10,000-11,000-foot range. So, we decide to simply take it slow. In hindsight, I am glad that I choose to stay back with him and a couple of others because it gives me time to keep my breath, but also it gives me time to think.

I start having this interesting thought or at least one that is interesting to me. I keep it to myself because I don't want to be that guy who is talking the whole way up. It's hard to carry on a conversation when you can hardly breathe. I have been in that situation. So, I decide to sit with my thought. It was a question really. Here is my question, "before industrial motion (trains and automobiles) becomes the standard way of travel, was there less emphasis on schedule and getting from point A to point B in a set period of time? Was there less expectation upon oneself or upon others to execute travel plans with precision?" I am asking myself this because before the car and the train the main ways to travel were by foot and by horse. Human beings and horses face physical limitations that machines do not. In other words, sometimes we cannot go full speed because we do not run the same way in high altitudes or in the thick of rain and snow. We are not machines. Sometimes we have to take our time and its good for us to take our time. We must deal with our limits, learn from them and grow from them.

We are finally making it to our place of camp and I am ready to launch this question at someone. I go for it. We are regaining our breath and our strength, which reduces the annoying question level to a minimum. "Do you think that before motorized travel people were more at ease with arrivals, departures and everything in between?" The person I am asking simply said, "well, I guess so." He does not offer much more and that's okay because, actually, it kept me thinking. I am thinking about all of the other good things that such a journey gives to me, in addition to getting from point A to point B, i.e., execution. Yes, having a destination towards which we are working or walking is important, otherwise we don't go or get anywhere. Sometimes, however, it can be the overriding focus – achieve, accomplish, execute.

This walk through the mountains, at a pace being measured by a human being's inability to acclimate to a high climate pace, provides me with many other unforeseen opportunities. It becomes a great help in achieving self-control, strength and solidity of spirit, and generous dedication to others, spending time with others.

We make to the base camp, slowly but surely, put up our tents and take a break. Are we arriving two hours late? I don't really know, we arrived when we did. The others were able to wait patiently for us; we were able to be patient with ourselves and with one another. We were suffering because of the length of the journey and the height of the mountains – I have the blisters to prove it, but I have a greater appreciation for taking time.

Providentially, on my way back from Wyoming I stumble upon a letter written by the American writer, Willa Cather. She is writing the letter describing her book that I am reading, "Death Comes for the Archbishop". It is not the main point of the letter, nor the main point of the book. Nevertheless, it speaks to the thought that I was having on the trails. She writes, telling about the old southwest, "It was then much harder to get about than it is today. There were no automobile roads and no hotels off the main lines of railroad. One had to travel by wagon and carry a camp outfit. One travelled slowly, and had plenty of time for reflection." I find that good writers seem to say the things I have jumbled up in my mind. They use the right words to say simple things that can oftentimes be difficult to express. Thanks Willa Cather!

Mary, Our Lady of Peace, pray for us,

Fr. Brian

The Story of Our Lady of Peace Church & Shrine

A story of trust, prayer, and perseverance.

Our Lady's Way is the remarkable story of the priests and people who turned a futureless church into a mecca of faith and conversion with a simple hope for the future, zeal for souls, and unwavering love for Christ and His Mother. Featuring personal testimonies from the priests and parishioners themselves, this book on the parish's history will inspire and encourage your pursuit of heaven.

PERPETUAL ADORATION

What is Adoration? Adoration of the Blessed Sacrament is one of the most profound types of prayer that we have as Catholics. Jesus wished to stay with us and the means He chose is the Blessed Sacrament. He is there, Body, Blood, Soul, and Divinity in the Most Holy Eucharist. At any time of day or night, we can come to the Church and Jesus is there… waiting for us.

To sign up for an adoration time slot, please fill out the form below and turn it in to the parish office or drop if off in the collection baskets.

For more information about how to become a member of the Perpetual Adoration Ministry please visit our website at: www.olop-shrine.org/perpetual-adoration/

WHO AM I TO JUDGE? WITH DR. EDWARD SRI - SESSION 1: DON'T IMPOSE YOUR MORALITY ON ME!

What is "right" and "wrong"? Is what's right for you right for me? These are difficult questions to discuss in our culture. We live in a society that supports the opinion that each person should make up his or her own morality,Äîthat there is no moral truth that applies to everyone. So, how do we talk about right and wrong in this world? In this series, Dr. Ted Sri explores the fragility of a relativist outlook and the importance of absolute truth.

DIOCESE & COMMUNITY NEWS

Bishop Oscar Cantú Statement on U.S. Supreme Court ruling on Dobbs Vs. Jackson.
Laws should reflect the values of society. We recognize that in a pluralistic society, there are several value systems. Yet, the Catholic Church wishes to uphold the protection of the most vulnerable, especially women in vulnerable situations and children, including those in the womb, as a fundamental human right for all. Therefore, the Church advocates for just laws that defend the vulnerable and for a culture that respects human life, from conception to natural death
